

AN IN-DEPTH LOOK AT UNDERLYING CONDITIONS

CONDITION & DESCRIPTION	WHAT TO THINK ABOUT
An Abundance of Social Gathering Places—that enable people to learn about what is happening in the community and begin to develop a sense of mutual trust. These are usually seedbeds of trust, though they can also be ways in which people stay within their own circles.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Where are people getting together with others in their daily lives (e.g., restaurants, kids' sporting events, backyard get-togethers, organized potlucks, local parks)?</li> <li>• Do people get together in large gathering places (such as at sporting events, festivals, farmer's markets, etc.), and to what extent do people interact with each other in these spaces?</li> </ul>
Organized Spaces for Interaction—where people can come together to learn about, discuss, and often act on community challenges. These spaces help a community begin to identify and tap existing resources to address common concerns.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Are there spaces for different people to express themselves and work together on shared concerns?</li> <li>• Will those who engage feel they can make a difference?</li> <li>• Who is helping bring different people together (e.g., leaders, residents, nonprofit organizations, etc.)?</li> </ul>
Catalytic Organizations—that help people in public life, spur discussion on community challenges and marshal a community's resources to move forward. These organizations help lay the foundation for community action but do not act as the driving force.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Are there organizations or groups that serve as catalytic engines of change on particular challenges (vs. simply providing services or programs)?</li> <li>• Is genuine learning about community challenges taking place and does it reflect what matters to the community?</li> <li>• How are organizations or groups bringing people together across dividing lines or silos?</li> <li>• Are new ideas being incubated and potentially spun off to others?</li> </ul>
Safe Havens for Decision-Makers—here, a community's leaders can deliberate and work through community concerns in "unofficial," candid discussions.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Are places being created where leaders can meet and feel "safe"?</li> <li>• How are people getting to know and trust each other—and building new norms?</li> </ul>
Strong, Diverse Leadership—that extends to all layers of a community, understands the concerns of the community as a whole, and serves as a connector among individuals and organizations throughout the community.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• To what extent do leaders at different levels of the community exist and are trusted (e.g., grassroots organizers, neighborhoods, faith leaders, nonprofit staff, elected leaders, etc.)?</li> <li>• Are there emerging leaders and do they feel seen and heard?</li> <li>• How are people's leadership capacities being developed?</li> </ul>
Informal Networks and Links—that connect various individuals, groups, organizations, and institutions together to create a cross-fertilization effect of experiences, knowledge, and resources. People carry and spread ideas, messages, and community norms from place to place.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• How are networks being built for people to share ideas and learn from one another?</li> <li>• How are relationships and links growing within and across networks?</li> <li>• How inclusive are networks?</li> </ul>
Conscious Community Discussion—where a community has ample opportunity to think about and sort through its public concerns before taking action. People play an active role in helping decide how the community should act	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Are people being engaged to express aspirations for the community (or on an issue or a project)?</li> <li>• How are people infusing what they learn into their goals, program design, and relationships?</li> <li>• To what extent does the community have an ethic (or habit) of engaging residents in discussions on what matters to people?</li> </ul>
Community Norms for Public Life—that help guide how people act individually, interact, and work together. These norms set the standards and tone for civic engagement.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• How are efforts helping to build more productive norms in the community (e.g., trust, working together, hearing and listening to all voices, taking action, etc.)?</li> <li>• What stories can people tell about how they are working together?</li> </ul>
Shared Purpose for the Community—that sends an explicit message about the community's aspirations and helps reinforce that everyone is headed toward a common goal.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• To what extent does a shared sense of purpose in the community exist?</li> <li>• Where can people talk about questions of shared purpose (e.g., in a staff or program meeting, board session, community engagement meeting, leadership discussion, etc.)?</li> <li>• How can people spread a shared sense of purpose?</li> </ul>
